- Suspicious Activity Reporting (SAR): Banks are required to file SARs with the NYDFS whenever they detect potentially illegal activity.
- Anti-Money Laundering Programs: Banks must develop and maintain comprehensive AML programs that incorporate policies, procedures, and training for employees.

Failure to comply with these regulations can result in significant fines and penalties, highlighting the importance of robust AML compliance. This is a vital aspect of maintaining the integrity of the New York financial system and preventing criminal activity.
